Moradabad district admin reopens temple shut 'since 1980 communal violence'

MANISH SAHU

THE MORADABAD district administration has reopened a cen-tury-old temple that is believed to have remained closed since 1980, have remained closed since 1980, when communal violence enupted in the city. Gauri Shankar Temple is situated in the Nagānai area. During restoration, the administratione-scavated the inner sanctum of the temple and claimed to have discovered some damaged idols of deties. Renovation works underway, with plans to restore the temple to its 'original state'.

A large crowd gathered around the temple Monday to witness its reopening. Police personnel have been deployed at the site to prevent any untoward incidents.

The entire process began af-a resident, Seva Ram, claimed ter a resident. Seva Ram, claimed that his ancestors had served as priests and caretalers of the tem-ple. He filled a complaint with the district administration and police on December 27 claiming that he had faced "threst with enemple" and faced "threst" whenever he attempted to "reopen the emple" and urged them to take action. He further alleged that the land had been unlawfully encroached upon by a person who allegedly purchased the house next to the temple three years ago.
